Jack McGuire is an experimental singer songwriter, composer, and sound designer whose music is influenced by his Dad's stories of seeing Pink Floyd live, an education in classical and electronic music, and by working at some of New York City's most progressive music venues. He is a graduate of The Juilliard School and has performed in all kinds of venues from Carnegie Hall, to arenas, to dive bars. The music he creates from all of this sounds like atmospheric dream pop backed by noisy drum machines, and lyrics about being alone. As a collaborator he enjoys making music for dance and theatre, and spent last August with the Dutch Kills Theatre Company at the Edinburgh Festival Fringe performing, Solitary, at the Assembly. Following the Fringe, he went on a small tour across Europe, performing the songs from his upcoming debut album, Tender, which was released June 1st, 2020.

Jack has adopted the code of conduct set forth by We Have Voice, and is dedicated to creating safe(r) spaces in the performing arts.
